

Biography:

Dr Iman El Sayed is an assistant Professor of Medical Statistics, Medical Research Institute, Alexandria University, Egypt. She has a professional knowledge of evidence synthesis, predictive analytics and Evidence Informed Policymaking. She works as a biostatistician, systematic reviewer and research methodologist conducting systematic reviews, meta-analysis, critical appraisal & Clinical Guideline development, Medical writing and statistical analysis. She Completed her master and doctor degrees at Alexandria University, Egypt. Prof El Sayed accomplished a cancer research fellowship at the University of Milan, Italy and has a specific interest in Cancer epidemiology and research. She also accomplished an Evidence synthesis fellowship at Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine, Cochrane Infectious Disease Group Editorial Base, Liverpool, UK. Then, she led and published cochrane reviews. She Joined the Global Burden of Disease collaboration, Institute of Health Metrics and Evaluation, USA and co-authored many publications in different disciplines. She has a particular interest in teaching, statistical analysis and publications. Dr Iman is also interested in Healthcare Quality and health system research. She accomplished Certified Professional Health Care Quality(CPHQ) certificate issued by National Association for Healthcare Quality(NAHQ). She is interested in Health Economics and Health Technology Assessment. She completed Health Technology Assessment Diploma at Cairo University, Egypt in partnership with Bournemouth University, UK.